

Fifteen United States senators will be elected this month.

If the present spirit of congress had been shown by the republicans of the session of last year, the democratic party would have been in its political grave.

The firm of Miln & Burleigh has been dissolved by mutual consent. They became jealous of each other when neither had anything to bring out the jealousy of the other.

One of the pension reforms would be simply to publish the names of the pensioners of the United States. Pension agents oppose this, and so does Congress. There are names on the pension roll that they are ashamed of.

The number of bodies taken from the Newhall house disaster, is thirty. The number whose lives were sacrificed in the calamity will not be far from 80 or 90, the greatest number that ever perished in a burning hotel in this country.

Mrs. Langtry's two weeks' business in Chicago brought about $25,000, half of which goes to her. However much people may differ about Mrs. Langtry's beauty, and whatever the press may say of her acting, she has got drawing power, and that is all she wants.

The Madison Democrat says: "Dispatches from Milwaukee state that among the victims of the late Newhall fire was the Hon. James H. Earnest, of Shullsburg, Lafayette county, in this state. Mr. Earnest was a life-long democrat. He served several terms in the legislature, and was well known throughout the state." The latest advice is that Mr. Earnest is among the saved.

The opera-going people of Chicago are up in arms over the deception Colonel Mapleson has been practicing in selling season tickets for Her Majesty's opera company. The season tickets were $20 for the six performances, the purchasers thinking that it would sing two nights and one matinee. It is now announced that Patti will sing only one night and one matinee, much to the disgust of season ticket buyers.

Mr. Theodore B. Elliott, of the law firm of Jenkins, Elliott & Winkler, died at the Kirby house, Milwaukee, on Thursday night, from injuries received while jumping from the third-story window of the Newhall house during the terrible fire of Wednesday morning. Mr. Elliott was one of the oldest and best known among his profession in the state, as well as one of the most prominent Odd Fellows, being a past grand master and past grand patriarch, and at the time of his death grand representative from Wisconsin to the sovereign grand lodge.

The Fitz John Porter bill which has passed the senate by a vote of 33 to 27, authorizes the president to nominate, and with the advice and consent of the senate to appoint him to the position of colonel in the army of the United States of the same grade and rank held by him at the time of his dismissal and in his disqualification, to place him on the retired list of the army as of that grade, the retired list being thereby increased in number to that extent; provided that Fitz John Porter shall receive no pay, compensation or allowance whatsoever prior to his appointment under this act.

Governor Callom, of Illinois, has been nominated for United States senator by the republicans. The nomination was not reached without a struggle and much bad feeling; and, when a motion was made to make it unanimous, there were mutterings of discontent, almost bordering on revolt. But when the time comes to vote, Governor Callom will be elected, and will take the place of Judge Davis. He is not a learned man, neither will he make an able senator; but he is a practical business man, and will generally be found on the right side of public questions.

It is claimed that there are more dissipated statesmen at Madison this winter than for several years past. The democrats having carried the assembly, there was a regular rush of democratic leaders to Madison, and when a crowd like this got together there is more or less hilarity and conviviality. A special dispatch was sent from Madison to the Milwaukee Sentinel which gave a picture of the scene when the democratic statesmen met for the purpose of organizing the assembly. There were a good many bottles of democratic argument used, and the Sentinel special said whisky flowed more freely than water, and debauchery was the rule of the hour. We predict the picture was somewhat overdrawn, although the democrats did feel remarkably jubilant, and disposed of a good deal of hot drinks.

ABOUT FITZ JOHN PORTER.
The Chicago Times prints the following editorial note:
The Janesville Gazette says: "General Dragg will defend Fitz John Porter when his case comes before the house. All democrats defend him. He was a traitor. Why will not republican papers tell the truth? If Fitz John Porter was a traitor, then what is Ulysses S. Grant, who now upon a full review of the case defends Porter? The effort for the reinstatement of Porter has found its best friends in highly influential republican circles. A republican president constituted a court of inquiry, upon whose report the argument in Porter's behalf is wholly rested. If he is reinstated, a republican congress will have passed the measure to that effect, and a republican president will have approved it. And yet every little republiclian paper will continue to declare that the democrats did it.

The Gazette will make no reply to the argument regarding the course of General Grant, republican congressmen, or a republican president in the matter of Fitz John Porter. The Gazette affirms that all democrats defend Porter, and that Porter was a traitor. That he willfully disobeyed orders whereby he kept himself out of the battle of August 29th, 1862, there is abundant evidence. He did not want to fight and would rather take the consequences of disobeying orders than move his troops where they would confront the enemy. He was within hearing of the cannon, and knew there was a fight going on between the union forces and the rebel army in which he was ordered to take part. But while the union troops were struggling for victory and the battle grew hotter and hotter, and all available forces were needed to win the day, Fitz John Porter, having more hatred for Pope and McDowell than love for the union, put the marching orders in his pocket, said nothing about it to his officers, and commanded his 13,000 men to stack their arms.

This is what Porter did on the 29th of August, 1862. Most of those who fell on the battle-field of Groveton, on that day, fell because of Porter's treachery. When he could have helped them he did not, and when he was ordered to march and join in the battle he would not; and in the face of these solemn and stubborn facts, Porter wants to be restored to his rank. The government might as well crown treason, as to do that thing.

The Chicago Times may say what it pleases about the course republican papers take in regard to Fitz John Porter, the fact nevertheless remains that his reinstatement would be a gross injustice to the dead. If, Grant, for selfish motives, should eat his own words and insult his own conscience in regard to Porter, that is no reason why the latter should have a new hearing or be restored to his former rank. Because three republicans in the senate voted for the relief of Porter, that does not make his case a good one. What the Gazette claims is that all democrats defend Porter, and that all the testimony goes to show that he willfully disobeyed orders, and thereby was a traitor.

JUDGE LYON AND THE SUPREME COURT.

There are a few papers in the state, notably among them the Eau Claire Free Press, that are advocating a change in the composition of the supreme court this spring. The term of Judge William Pitt Lyon expires in January of next year, and an election to fill the vacancy will be held on the first Tuesday of next April. A very large majority of the members of the bar of the state will favor the re-election of Judge Lyon, and the people regardless of party will heartily endorse the sentiment of the bar.

But in the northern part of the state, where they have an idea that all offices, judicial as well as political, must be farmed out geographically, they want a man on the supreme bench who will represent that portion of Wisconsin. They seem to look upon a supreme judgeship as a sectional matter, and are advocating the claims of some one from the eighth or ninth congressional districts. There is evil in this view of the matter. The very moment the people of Wisconsin decide that the judge on the supreme bench must be distributed with geographical nicety over the state, that moment they bring contempt upon the court.

But in regard to Judge Lyon, he has made a very pains-taking and industrious judge. He is as able a man as there is on the bench. His experience and knowledge of the established law of the state and the precedents in all the courts of the country, make him of far too great a value to the people to be allowed to retire to private life. During the twelve years he has been upon the supreme bench, he has given the best services that industry and ability and a thorough knowledge of the law could bestow, and the voice of the people should be in unison in calling upon him to become an independent candidate for re-election.

Those who are seeking for a new man in the northern part of the state, should remember that Wisconsin is not bounded by lines within itself when places on the supreme bench are to be filled. The positions thereon are not to be parceled out to suit certain localities. If the best judges could be taken from Milwaukee, let them all come from that city, or from Madison or from Fond du Lac, or from any other city, but never make up the court of last resort in Wisconsin on the principle that you would send men to congress. This was the theory upon which the framers of the constitution proceeded, and whenever the people begin to turn out the places on supreme court benches they will bankrupt the intelligence of any court ever established.

This is an important matter, and one which requires some careful thought. Above all things let the press and the people work together in keeping the judiciary out of politics, and especially let the supreme court be altogether above geographical considerations. Judge Lyon is a gentleman for whom the bar and the people have profound regard. As we have already said, he is one of the ablest members of the supreme court, and when the question comes up as to who shall be called out as an independent candidate there should not be a single voice against the re-election of Judge Lyon.

Mr. H. Bowman, Ashtabula, O., says his horse's foot was crushed on one side of the frog to the top of the heel, and badly dried up. Cole's Veterinary Carbolic Acid effected a complete cure, so that there are no signs of lameness even after a long drive. He heartily recommends it with gratitude and pleasure.

A MAIDEN'S PERIL.

A Beautiful Young St. Louis Lady Abducted by a Gang of Hoodlums.

Return of the Victim to Her Friends.—Her Story Highly Sensational.

St. Louis, Jan. 13.—There is great excitement here over the disappearance of Miss Zerelda Garrison, a young girl of 17, remarkable for her beauty, and one of the belles of the city. She was last seen alive last Saturday, when a little after 1 o'clock, she left the residence of her uncle, O. L. Garrison, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Morris, and came down town to the corner of Fifth and Olive streets. She there took a street car for Wild Hunter's, the terminus of the car line, in the extreme southern part of the city. The conductor of the car remembers her distinctly. When she got off the car at Wild Hunter's she asked to be directed to the convent of the Sacred Heart, which is only a dozen blocks away. Since then Miss Garrison has not been seen or heard from. The conductor noticed on the car platform four rough-looking men of the hoodlum stamp, and they commented during the journey on Miss Garrison's handsome appearance. They said she was the most beautiful woman they had ever seen on the car. It is supposed that these men had something to do with the disappearance of the young lady, and most horrible suspicions are aroused.

Miss Garrison was returning to the convent to pursue her studies. She had not returned since the Christmas holidays, having been detained by the visits of friends. She had been studying there for one year. She always made the journey to the convent in a carriage, but her sister's letter came on Saturday, and so she decided to go in a street car. Her disappearance was not known to the family or the police until yesterday afternoon, as her relatives thought she was at the convent, and the sisters at the convent thought she was at home.

Zerelda Garrison is the daughter of Mrs. Abram Garrison, and resides at Kirkwood, a suburban town twelve miles from St. Louis. Her father, O. L. Garrison, secretary of the St. Louis Steel and Iron company, is her uncle, and she is a relative of Commodore Garrison. Detectives since yesterday have been following every clue, but without avail.

Zerelda Garrison is only 17, but as well developed as a girl of 21. She is strikingly handsome, has brown hair, and eyes full of expression and life. Her complexion is fair, and she is graceful in carriage and stylish in appearance; weighs about 100 pounds.

The detectives and Chief of Police Campbell have been searching for the victim of the car for a day, in vain. The men from the Vulcan Steel works, not far away, aided in the search. Yesterday the sergeant of police and a squad of twenty men examined all the streets without result.

Mrs. Abram Garrison, mother of the girl, has not yet been informed of the disappearance. The relations have no theory, but feel sure that the girl has been kidnapped, and that the city is in danger, and the probable fate of the poor girl is the universal theme of conversation. The police are actively at work, and so far the efforts have resulted in nothing.

The Sacred Heart convent is a noted Catholic educational institution, situated about five miles south of the center of the city, and enjoys a high reputation. The vicinity of the convent is very sparsely settled.

Late yesterday afternoon a letter dated St. Louis was received by the family from Miss Garrison herself. She stated that she was a victim of abduction, and was held by four men. Last evening a letter was received at the Oliver Garrison residence, from a party whose name was not disclosed, announcing that the young lady could be rescued, and that the family would be willing to confer with the family for terms for her release. Upon receipt of this startling information the detectives were notified, and the search for the girl was renewed. For the correspondent, D. B. Garrison and D. K. Ferguson, at once set out for the Garrison residence, and Mr. Oliver Garrison awaited developments at his office. He would not disclose anything further until the result of the interview with the mysterious informant was made known. He was to have been held by the police if he turned up.

press, but without fruitful results. One of those indicted last fall was nothing more than a hired hand, and his friends were positive he would receive sixty votes on the first ballot on Tuesday, and that his supporters would carry him until the end. A prominent republican, identified with the opposition to Ferry's re-election, declared that the latter would receive only fifty-eight votes on the first ballot, and after the third ballot not more than forty-six; that subsequent ballots would never reach that number, and that after the fifth or sixth ballot, or about the third day, the Ferry managers would be able to keep these together. It is conceded on all sides that Senator Ferry's friends will possess the power to name a compromise candidate, and anybody objectionable to the present senator cannot be selected. It is thought by many that if Ferry is finally deserted his influence will be cast in favor of somebody from the eastern part of the state, so that he himself will be in better condition, by reason of location, to antagonize Conger in four years.

THE NEWHALL FIRE.

Partial Remains of Five Human Beings Dug From the Ruins.

Scenes at the Morgue—Sixty-Seven Victims of the Calamity.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 13.—The work on the ruins was continued yesterday, but with a force of men somewhat smaller than that of the day before. This seems queer, the number should be increased instead of diminishing. Interest is clearly waning, and the solid columns of people which surrounded the place Thursday are much shattered and depleted. Of course the colder weather has something to do with this. The heaps of rubbish are still growing, and begin to tower so high that the workmen are hemmed in, cut off from the gaze of the curious. About midnight Thursday night the flames burst out afresh in two or three places at the center and northwest corner. The firemen were called out and remained on duty till noon yesterday, throwing volumes of water into the smoldering ruins. At the northwest corner the workmen have arrived at the bottom of the basement, and are working in warm water knee deep.

At an early hour the workmen began to find articles in the debris, and hundreds of things were found, among which were the following: Burdick & Arnstadt's printing presses were uncovered and found in a bad condition. A photograph, on the back of which was the name of E. Leland, written in black ink, and the studio imprint showing it was taken at C. D. Fredericks and Co.'s, 106 Broadway, New York. Quantities of molten type in all conceivable shapes, were taken out of the quarters occupied by Burdick & Arnstadt. Large numbers of burned books, newspaper files, etc., were taken out of the front-chest. Some would have the edges and corners charred, while the centre would be in good condition and readable. A coat was found which contained an unburned newspaper, and a memorandum written in cipher and marked "Turro Hauto" was also picked up. Early in the day a fancy apron, badly burned, and a Knight Templar's sword, in fair condition, but unmarked, were drawn up. A scarf and scarf-pin, thought to have belonged to Capt. Vose, were picked up; also a pair of silver spectacle frames, a silver dollar, window shades, and a lot of things, but nothing that was marked with a name was found.

The first body was found at 11 o'clock. It was identified as that of Mrs. Brown. At 12:30 two bodies were found in the ruins. The remains are so badly charred that there are no means of identification. The scene is most sickening around the ruins. The charred remains taken to the morgue are about twenty. Two more bodies were found later, the last proving to be that of Miss Hagar, a domestic.

W. E. Wiley, of Detroit, who came here Monday to take the local agency of the Michigan Central, is the last victim reported. E. E. Wentworth, of Chicago, says that Wiley came from Chicago on Monday, and telegraphed back that he had taken a room at the Newhall. No trace of him could be found. William C. Hall, of Laporte, Ind., who had both legs broken and otherwise terribly injured by jumping from the burning building last Wednesday morning, at Dr. Burdick's office. His body was immediately embalmed and forwarded to Laporte, accompanied by friends of the deceased. The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Johnson, two Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Cramer, of this Evening Wisconsin, are very much better, and both will probably recover. The funeral of J. H. Fisher, who died Thursday night, will occur to-day, as will also that of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Johnson. Five victims of the fire were buried from St. John's cathedral at 11 o'clock yesterday forenoon, with imposing ceremonies.

The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Johnson are lying side by side, at the residence of Mrs. M. E. Jewett, 474 Marshall street. The funeral services will be held at the residence of the Baptist church. The services will be short and simple, consisting of scripture reading, singing of a hymn, and a few remarks by the pastor. The funeral service will be held at the residence of the Baptist church. A number of relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, from a distance, have arrived to attend the funeral. The board of managers of the Protestant Orphan asylum, of which the dead lady was an active member, will attend in a body.

At the morning excitement over the arrival of the remains became so great during the day that ropes were stretched around the building and premises, and officers from the sheriff's force were detailed to keep the crowd back from the place. The remains were placed in the coffin at 10 o'clock, and were carried to the place of interment at 11 o'clock. The remains were placed in the coffin at 10 o'clock, and were carried to the place of interment at 11 o'clock.

WISCONSIN.

Determined Efforts of the Prohibitionists to Secure the Submission of a Constitutional Amendment.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 13.—There is no doubt but what the Prohibitionists are determined to make a serious move on the legislature this winter for the passage of a joint resolution to submit to the people a constitutional amendment forbidding the manufacture and sale of intoxicating beverages in Wisconsin. The officers of the Wisconsin Woman's Christian Temperance union have opened an office here, and are flooding the state with black petitions to the legislature. Besides their own local agents the officers of the state union think they can rely on ministers, railroad officials, manufacturers, and others to circulate petitions.

The Colorado Senatorship.

DENVER, Jan. 13.—The aspirant to the Colorado senatorship are General Hamill, Lieutenant Governor Tabor, Judge Bowen, ex-Governor Pitkin, and General Routt. A caucus is to be held next Monday, and there is every probability of a dead-lock.

A WHISTLING GIRL.

A whistling girl and a crowing hen. Never come to no good end.

Thus, with a happy disregard of rules for negatives and rhymes, the whistling girl and the crowing hen, very gravely, many times, and of the end it may be true: But, alas! the whistling girl, and the crowing hen, never come to no good end.

But, oh! the whistling girl I've met. At blithe she is as any bird. And when she whistles, her throat and eye Out on the air a merry strain. Lips that, kiss-shaped, look, when they pour Out on the air a merry strain. As though, as some one says, "A rose Had shut to be a bud again."

From task to task, with lightsome step, She hastens, whistling as she goes. And her feet lands where they touch; And order in disorder grows. But never in such haste is she She can't pass a word to speak To greet her children, or her friends. A pretty dimpled baby cheek.

And, spite of the old saying, I Went near my heart about you. That once danced gay to the tunes Of a whistling girl and a crowing hen. A girl who soon I'll call my own. My wife, my sweetheart and my friend; And, when I'm old and gray, and blind, Please Heaven, live till she shall end.

—Margaret Lyndine, in Harper's Weekly.

A SISTER OF CHARITY.

"Well, you surprise me! And he is giving up business and going away?"

"Yes; going to Venezuela or Pernambuco, or some outlandish place nobody ever heard of. So his mother told me."

"Well, I'll never predict another marriage as long as I live. I was sure, and I have often said it, that Mary Griffith and young Robertson were cut out for one another—and were sure to be married."

"Can she have refused him?"

"I don't know, but I'll try and find out. If Mary Griffith refused him she has made the mistake of her life."

This was an after-talk between Mrs. Innes and her cousin, Miss Hattie Aird—a maiden lady, who, born in Scotland, had long lived in England, was a recognized lady in the little town of Middlebury, and was freely trusted with all its open secrets. The "young Robertson" in question having also come from Scotland, Miss Hattie Aird naturally took a kindly interest in him, and sometimes held him as a specimen of the young men which Scotland produces—poor, perhaps, but well educated, and fitted to make their way in life anywhere.

The Griffiths had a good position in the town. Several of the country families called upon them once a year. They frequently alluded to "Cousin George," explaining that Sir George Griffith was meant, Her Majesty's Commissioner to the Rajah of Serenapatam. There was beside a Griffith, a Baronet in Wales, of whom they spoke with affectionate familiarity. Of the three daughters, Mary was the youngest, and she differed from her family in her entire reticence regarding these relationships.

Mary was a many quiet and unobtrusive ways, had a marked admiration and appreciation from Mr. Henry Robertson, who represented a Scottish company in the town, and cared for his only nephew—a widowed mother. He was recognized as a first-rate business man, a "good fellow," and in all his dealings with others a "thorough gentleman." Miss Hattie Aird said that "some were gentlemen only by accident, but young Robertson was a gentleman by nature and by education."

Because he had the instincts of a gentleman he felt that he ought not to go farther in relation to Mary without her consent. He sought an interview. It was very formal. Mary Griffith was stately and dignified in the last degree. She showed in every tone how much she was conceding. But she put no barrier in the way of his offering himself to her daughter, adding, however:

"Of course, Mr. Robertson, you can't expect us to know your people."

"I have but my mother, Mrs. Griffith," said he. He did not comprehend the lady's meaning. She made it plainer.

"Oh! of course, Mr. Robertson; and I am sure it is highly proper for you to be good to your mother. I mean that we—my daughters and I—cannot carry our acquaintance outside our class."

Her meaning now dawned upon and startled the young man.

"Does Miss Mary always say as you do about that?" said he.

"Miss Mary will always respect the feelings and the standing of her family. I am sure, Mr. Robertson."

"Then, madam," was the prompt reply, "may I beg you to think no more of my call, or of me? It is the same as if I had not come," he added, and bowed himself out. A man may be excused for a little confusion at such a time.

But the resignation of his place, the closing up of a business which had greatly grown in his hand, and his sailing for South America, soon followed, and made quite a little stir in Middlebury. We shall not follow him. It is fair to presume that his qualities would secure him a measure of success anywhere.

ABOUT NAMES.

Many persons have no uniform way of writing their names or of recording the names of others. I knew a young lady once whose name, Hannah Matilda Andrews, which in her own handwriting was "H. M. Andrews," in her father's was "H. M. Andrews," in her mother's was "H. M. Andrews," in her brother's was "H. M. Andrews," in her sister's was "H. M. Andrews," in her cousin's was "H. M.
